

History of Feng Shui

The metaphysical science of Feng Shui is based upon well founded principles and logic. The roots of the science lie in I-Ging, in the Book of Changes.

The knowledge was originally implemented in the YIN domain, i.e. in the area of graves. It was used to find a grave for the emperor in a section of land that his family would support.

Only later was the knowledge developed in the YANG domain, i.e. in the "living" houses. The origin of the YANG Feng Shui lies in the time of the Shang dynasty 1500-1050 B.C. This was the time of watching the stars and the landscape. The knowledge and the scientific formulae as we know them today were first used around 940 B.C., as this was the time of the first construction of houses in China.

The millennia old usage of harvesting the forces of nature has the goal of success, harmony, vitality and thereby to advance constructive alterations in the life of the person. The complex science was the secret of the dynasties until 1949.

Due to political changes, the People's Republic of China was proclaimed in 1950 and Feng Shui masters fled to Taiwan, Singapore and Hong Kong. From there fragments of knowledge reached the USA in 1960, the time of the new age movement. Marketer publicized books – although there is no book that communicates the entire authentic knowledge.
